CRUSHED TO DEATH BY WAGON

Earl Straun Meets Tragic Death At Marley Wed.

Earl Straun, aged 34 years, met a tragic death at Marley Wednesday afternoon at about 1:20 o'clock in a runaway accident.

Mr. Straun who resided on the Louis Tilley farm northwest of Marley had come to town with a load of 100 bushels of oats which he was taking to the Alex Haley elevator in Marley when his team shied at a passing train on the Wabash railroad and ran away. Mr. Straun was thrown off the load and fell in such a manner that the wagon passed over his body crushing him to death. It is thought that death was instantaneous.

Witnesses to the accident hurried to his side but he was beyond all aid. The body was removed to the undertaking rooms of Wunderlich, Harris & Sontag at Joliet. The inquest was held on Thursday.

Mr. Straun had moved to this section from Nebraska this spring. He is survived by his widow, four children, his mother, Mrs. Mary Straun of Lockport, two brothers, Royal of Lockport and John of Joliet.

ORLAND STUDENTS WIN

SPELLING LAURELS

Orland Park scored a victory on Tuesday, April 8th when Hazel Rust and Royal Glahn of the village grade school claimed two of the three township delegates to the annual Cook County spelling match. Dist. 137 came second with one delegate, Laura Andresen.

The contest was conducted by Miss Nellie G. McMahon, assistant Supt. of Cook County Schools and was one of a series of contests conducted this week in every township of Cook County.

Representatives from the several schools of Orland township were present. Fifty words were pronounced from the Jones speller. The following pupils spelled the entire list correctly and won Perfect Score Ribbons: Marie Yunker, Marie Smith Laura Andresen, Dorothy Tilsey, Dorothy Cooper, Jean Rettenhausen, Walter Soderlund, Hazel Rust, Evelyn Hansen and Royal Glahn.

A second list was then given. This resulted in three correct papers and decided that Laura Andresen, Hazel Rust and Royal Glahn will represent Orland township at the Cook County contest in Chicago on April 26, 1924.

Warning, Mildred Woodrich, Walter F. Bettenhausen, Harold W. Geuthner, Clyde C. Knudson, Richard E. Kohl, Alvin W. Kohlhausen, Melvin C. Kohlhausen, Albert E. Lebnert, Robert M. Maue, Richard M. Muehler and Edward F. Schenkel.

James Cooper of Mokena Passes Away Suddenly

James Cooper, well known resident of Mokena and formerly of Orland township, passed away quite suddenly at his home in Mokena on last Friday morning at 1:40 o'clock after being only ill in bed a few days. The last time he was out of his home was last Tuesday when he went to the polls to vote at the town election.

He attained the age of 72 years, 7 months and 30 days. Mr. Cooper was born in Orland township, August 5, 1851. On October 6, 1875 he was united in marriage to Mary A. Daniel of Orland, who passed away April 2, 1890. To this union three children were born: Thomas Daniel Elmer L., and Celia M., all of whom survive him.

On Jan. 2, 1895 he was joined in the holy bonds of matrimony with Katherine Wiler of Orland. Two children were born to this marriage, Cora H., (Mrs. Howard Gorham) and Everett James, all of whom survive him.

James Cooper lived continuously in Orland Township until four years ago, since which time he has lived in Mokena.

At the age of fifteen years he dedicated his life to the Kingdom of God and united with the M. E. church at Orland, of which he remained an exemplary member until his transfer to the Mokena M. E. church. Here he was a regular attendant, a member of the official board and a pillar in the church to which he faithfully devoted himself.

As a citizen, he always took an active part in promoting the welfare of the community and was especially interested in the education of the young. He served for over 40 years as school director of District 138 Orland and District 159 Mokena.

A good neighbor, a steadfast friend, a loyal citizen, a conscientious Christian, an exemplary husband and a loving father has gone. The James Cooper whom we knew in the flesh is gone, but not his influence which will live on. He has entered into his great reward. But his blessed memory will ever be kept green by his sorrowing widow, five children, five grand children, one great grand child, two sisters and five brothers besides unnumbered hosts of friends and neighbors.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the late home to the Mokena M. E. church, the Rev. A. R. Mangus, pastor of this church and the Rev. Mr. Brown of the Marley Baptist church officiated at the funeral services, the latter preaching the funeral sermon.

Mrs. Mabel Mall and Miss Freida Zumstein sang. The floral offerings which blanketed the casket were numerous and beautiful.

The church was all together too small to hold the hundreds of mourners who came from long distances as well as from neighboring towns to pay their final tributes of honor. Hundreds of people lined the walks and street in front of the church.

The Mokena Girl Scouts were the flower bearers. Two special autos were used to transport the floral offerings to the cemetery.

Burial took place in the family lot in the Orland cemetery. On account of the bad condition of the roads between Mokena and Orland the funeral cortege had to detour great many miles out of the way, taking the Lincoln highway to Chicago Heights, thence on the Dixie way to Homewood, thru Hazelcrest and Specialville, thence thru Midlothian, north of Tinley Park, thru Orland to the cemetery southwest of Orland.

TAKEN ILL IN CHICAGO

Fred Mau of Mokena went to Chicago to visit with his brother last week and while there was taken ill. His brother had him taken to a Chicago hospital. After being there a few days Mr. Mau wrote home asking Mrs. Mau to come and get him which she did.

MR. KINGBIRD

ON THE topmost branch of a tree sat Mr. Kingbird, or at least he made this his lookout, for Mrs. Kingbird had a nest full of eggs and whenever her watchful mate saw anyone approach within seeing distance of the nest, he darted forth at the trespasser.

It happened that on this morning Mr. Fox was resting in a shady spot not far from the tree where Mr. Kingbird was watching his home. Mr. Fox had nothing in particular to do, so he just watched what was going on around him.

Pretty soon he saw Jimmy Crow flying toward him and saw Jimmy alight on the limb of a nearby tree. "Now I wonder what that thief is up to," mused Mr. Fox, forgetful of his own shortcomings. "Jimmy never does anything without a reason. I guess I'll watch and see what he has on his mind."

Mr. Fox did not have to wait long, for in a minute Jimmy flew a short distance from the tree where he had been sitting. Then he whirled and made for the limb of a tree which hung over the stone wall by the orchard.

Mr. Fox was so intent upon watch-

A SUGGESTION

IF SUCH shall be your mental state
That you can't help exaggerate,
Instead of, as most mortals do,
Exaggerating things of rue,
Heed this small bit of halting rhyme
And try for just a little time,
To magnify your joys and see
How much more happy you will be.
Then take your stock of daily troubles
And turn them into airy bubbles—
The daily troubles that you've nursed—
And blow them up until they burst.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

ALAS, poor woman! She can please some of the men most of the time, and most of the men some of the time; but no mortal woman ever could please ALL of the men any of the time, nor ANY man all of the time.

A man's love has to be repeatedly wound up, like a clock; but once a woman's heart gets started, it is supposed to go on working, automatically, forever no matter how many shocks it receives.

To be a successful wife, a woman has to spend half her time stimulating a man's vanity and the other half reducing the fever, so that it won't go to his head and make him dizzy.

ing Jimmy Crow that he did not see Mr. Kingbird until he was almost upon Jimmy. He saw Jimmy suddenly turn tail and with a noise something like a squawk fly away with Mr. Kingbird flying after him.

Mr. Fox pushed his head out and looked after them from his resting place. "Well, I would not have believed it if I had not seen it with my own eyes," he exclaimed. "He did not make the least effort to defend himself, and I thought Jimmy Crow was brave. I don't understand it."

Mr. Fox did not have much time to think over what he had seen, for in a few minutes back came Mr. Kingbird and alighted on a tree close to Mr. Fox.

Mr. Fox is not at all bashful. He was not acquainted with Mr. Kingbird nor did he know his name, but he meant to find out, so he crept out of his hiding place.

"You are a brave fellow, whoever you are," he said to Mr. Kingbird, "and I should like to know your name, for I was very much pleased at the way you sent that thieving Jimmy Crow about his business. He is a bad creature to have around."

"I am the Kingbird," answered Mr. Kingbird proudly. "I have an orange-red crest under my crown, but that no one sees unless they are quite close to me. You may have heard one of my other names. I am also called Bee Martin. I am very fond of bees. And I am sometimes called the Tyrant Flycatcher."

"But this last name I do not think I deserve; of course, I am an insect catcher and I do catch bees—drones preferred, and some say I can pick them out on the wing from the other

FACTS about your name; it's history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

HENRIETTA

HENRIETTA is a charming sixteenth century product. Of Teutonic origin, but extraordinarily prevalent in France and England, it signifies "home rule" and comes from the mythological legend of the porter of Valhail, called Heimdal, who "sleeps more lightly than a bird and can hear the grass growing in the fields and the wool on the sheeps' backs."

The first syllable of this accomplished person's name is the basis for masculine names without number. Through various stages of Heinrichs, Heinrichs and Heinz's, the French Henri is reached. The kings that it named are legion. Across the channel it became Henry.

The feminine form originated in France. Its first use seems to be in the house of Stuart d'Aubigne in 1588, when a daughter was called Henriette. The court of Catherine de Medici was noted for its Henriettes. The name reached England through the daughter of Henry IV, Henriette Marie, whom the Prayer Book called Queen Mary. Her godchildren, however, were always addressed as Henrietta.

Coral is Henrietta's talismanic stone. It will guard her from contagion and other evil, and is said to have therapeutic value in combating anemia. Monday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

last a telephone call came for one of the guests, and the spell was broken. Later Psyche explained in confidence, after sitting down she discovered that there were thirteen of them; Psyche knew the fate hanging over the first one to leave; she was no heroine, she confessed it; and if that message had not called away her unconscious victim they would have been sitting there yet!

After that Psyche's habit began to grow. She built a new house in the country, and visitors began to tell strange tales. One visitor had been surprised to find no mirror in her room. Of course mirrors were eliminated lest one be broken. Another told of her first meal at Psyche's. As soup was served and she put down her spoon, she wondered if her expression were as disappointed as the expressions of the other guests.

"I hope you like cooking without salt," said Psyche suddenly. "I am superstitious, you see, about spilling salt."

So it went. When there was pie for dessert, Psyche explained that every person at the table was being given a piece with the point directed toward him.

"I never saw," said she, "why such things should be left to chance."

In spite of Psyche's care, however, her guests did not find that many of them received letters the following morning.

The climax of Psyche's habit came when her horse ran away with her one day right across a funeral procession. Out of sheer fright she took to her bed. For a year she stayed there. A week before the year was up she made final arrangements for her demise. The fatal hour arrived. But Psyche did not die. And so the spell was snapped. It had taken a whole year under the shadow of a horrible dread to break the habit of superstition to which Psyche had become a slave.

WESTERN LINES GIVE PAY BOOST

Increase of About 5 Per Cent to 55,000 Trainmen Is Announced.

Chicago.—Wage increases of about 5 per cent to 55,000 railroad trainmen and conductors were formally announced here. The pay boost, considered alone, would add approximately $5,000,000 annually to pay rolls of 55 carriers in the territory west of Chicago. However, it is understood the brotherhood representatives agreed to make concessions in the modification of certain working rules. These will save the railways much money.

The agreement climaxed negotiations that were in progress in the Transportation building for more than two weeks. Up to Monday reports from the secret conferences indicated slight prospects for a settlement. Failure of the independent parley would have left the issue to the United States railroad labor board.

Many of the eastern roads and two important lines in the South, already have renewed contracts with certain groups of train service employees. Some of these, notably the New York Central and the Pennsylvania, granted pay increases of more than 5 per cent to all in the train services—conductors, trainmen, engineers, firemen and switchmen.

Of the lines running west from Chicago, the Chicago Great Western, the Chicago & Alton and the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern are not parties to the agreement. However, the roads granting the increase represent about 90 per cent of the mileage west.

Hamon's $18,700 Paid Harding's Hotel Bill?

Washington.—According to testimony given by his ex-partner to the Teapot Dome inquiry committee, Jake Hamon, Oklahoma oil man and political boss, paid the bill of $18,700 for Warren Harding's flag-decked and expensive campaign headquarters on the second floor of the Congress hotel, Chicago, during the 1920 convention. He did it because his wife wanted him to, according to the testimony. Hamon was working for Governor Lowden on the floor of the convention and behind the scenery, but she was boosting in peacock alley for Harding, whose distant relative she was.

U. S. Demands Albania Get Americans' Slayers

Washington.—The United States government, through Charge d'Affaires Kidding, has made representations to the Albanian government, in connection with the slaying by Albanian bandits of two American business men, George B. Delong, New York City, and Robert L. Coleman, San Francisco. The Albanian government has promised to dispatch troops in pursuit of the bandits.

Michigan to Coolidge by a Two to One Vote

Detroit, Mich.—President Coolidge carried the Michigan presidential primaries by a two to one vote over Johnson and Simpson. Coolidge's most surprising victory was in Wayne county (Detroit), which he carried by 10,000 votes. On the Democratic ticket Ford and Ferries ran a neck-and-neck race, which may require the official count to decide.

Manufacturer Turns Stock Over to His Employees

Birmingham, Ala.—John J. Egan, Atlanta capitalist and president of the American Cast Iron Pipe company, who died a few days ago, in his last will and testament, has carried out his pledge made a few years ago to conduct business along the "golden rule" lines and has bequeathed his entire holdings of common stock in the company to the employees.

Laborites' Rent Bill Beaten in Commons

London.—Premier MacDonald's Laborite government was defeated, 221 to 212, in the house of commons when the rent bill, designed to aid unemployed, was rejected on second reading. The Labor government does not intend to resign, but will hold a conference to determine whether the bill will be reintroduced minus the objectionable features.

Eggs Ten Cents a Dozen; Too Cheap to Gather Up

LaFollette's Platform

Washington.—The platform of the progressive division of the Republican party, drawn up by Senator Robert M. LaFollette and built principally on the theory of government ownership, was announced.

DOCTOR FRANKLIN

SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin. Binkus has received a letter from Washington to be carried across the ocean, and Jack sails with him. Arriving in England, Binkus is arrested, but Jack has the letter and proceeds to London.

CHAPTER V

London and the Philosopher.

The stir and prodigious reach of London had appalled the young man. The thought thrilled him that somewhere in the great crowd, of which he was now a part, were the two human beings he had come so far to see. He put on his best clothes and with the letter which had been carefully treasured—under his pillow at night and pinned to his pocket lining through the day—set out in a cab for the lodgings of Doctor Franklin. Through a maze of streets where people were "thick as the brush in the forests of Tryon county" he proceeded until after a journey of some thirty minutes the cab stopped at the home of the famous American on Bloomsbury square. Doctor Franklin was in and would see him presently, so the flustered servant informed the young man after his card had been taken to the doctor's office. He was shown into a reception room and asked to wait, where others were waiting. An hour passed and the day was growing dusk when all the callers save Jack had been disposed of. Then Franklin entered. Jack remembered the strong, well-knit frame and kindly gray eyes of the philosopher. His thick hair, hanging below his collar, was now white. He was very grand in a suit of black Manchester velvet with white silk stockings and bright silver buckles on his shoes. There was a gentle dignity in his face when he took the boy's hand and said with a smile:

"You are so big, Jack. You have built a six foot two inch man of that small lad I knew in Albany, and well finished, too—great thighs, heavy shoulders, a moustache, a noble brow, and shall I say the eye of Mars? It's a wonder what time and meat and bread and potatoes and air can accomplish. But perhaps industry and good reading have done some work on the job."

Jack blushed and answered: "It would be hard to fix the blame."

Franklin put his hand on the young man's shoulder and said:

"She is a lovely girl, Jack. You have excellent good taste. I congratulate you. Her pulchritude has a background of good character and she is alive with the spirit of the New World. I have given her no chance to forget you if that had been possible. Since I became the agent in England of yourself and sundry American provinces, I have seen her often, but never without longing for the gift of youth. How is my family?"

"They are well. I bring you letters."

"Come up to my office and we'll give an hour to the news."

When they were seated before the grate fire in the large, pleasant room above stairs whose windows looked out upon the square, the young man said:

"First I shall give you, sir, a letter from Major Washington. It was entrusted to a friend of mine who came on the same ship with me. He was arrested at Deal, but, fortunately, the letter was in my pocket."

"Arrested? Why?"

"I think, sir, the charge was that he had helped to tar and feather a British subject."

"Feathers and tar are poor arguments," the Doctor remarked as he broke the seal of the letter.

It was a long letter and Franklin sat for near half an hour thoughtfully reading and rereading it. By and by he folded and put it into his pocket, saying as he did so: "An angry man cannot even trust himself. I sent some letters to America on condition that they should be read by a committee of good men and treated in absolute confidence and returned to me. Certain members of that committee had so much gunpowder in their hearts it took fire and their prudence and my reputation have been seriously damaged, I fear. The contents of those letters are now probably known to you."

"Are they the Hutchinson, Rogers and Oliver letters?"

"The same."

"I think they are known to every one in America that reads. We are indignant that these men born and raised among us should have said that a colony ought not to enjoy all the liberties of a parent state and that we should be subjected to coercive measures. They had expressed no such opinion save in these private letters. It looked like a base effort to curry favor with the English government."

"Yes, they were overworking the curry comb," said Franklin. "I had been protesting against an armed force in Boston. The government declared that our own best people were in favor of it. I, knowing better, denied the statement. To prove their claim, a distinguished baronet put the letters in my hands. He gave me leave to send them to America on condition that they should not be published. Of course, they proved nothing but the treachery of Hutchinson, Rogers and Oliver. Now I seem to be tarred by the same stick."

Jack told him of his prospects and especially of the generosity of his friend Solomon Binkus and of the plight the latter was in.

"He must be a remarkable man," said Franklin. "With Preston's help he will be coming on to London in a day or so. If necessary you and I will go down there. We shall not neglect him. Have you any dinner clothes? They will be important to you."

"I thought, sir, that I should best wait until I had arrived here."

"You thought wisely. I shall introduce you to a good cloth mechanic. Go to him at once and get one suit for dinner and perhaps two for the street. It costs money to be a gentleman here. It's a fine art. While you are in London you'll have to get the uniform and fall in line and go through the evolutions or you will be a 'North American savage.' You shall meet the Hares in my house as soon as your clothes are ready. Ask the tailor to hurry up. They must be finished by Wednesday noon. You had better have lodgings near me. I will attend to that for you."

The Doctor sat down and wrote on a number of cards. "These will provide for cloth, linen, leather and hats," he said. "Let the bills be sent to me. Then you'll not be cheated. Come in tomorrow at half after two."

Jack bade the Doctor good night and drove to The Spread Eagle where, before he went to bed, he wrote to his parents and a long letter to the Pennsylvania Gazette, describing his voyage and his arrival subsequently as the facts are here recorded. Next morning he ordered every detail in his "uniforms" for morning and evening wear and returning again to the inn found Solomon waiting in the lobby.

"Here I be," said the scout and trapper.

"What happened to you?"

"S'arched an' shoved me into a dark hole in the wall. Ye know, Jack, with you an' me, it allus 'pears to be workin'."

"What?"

"Good luck. Cur'us thing the papers was on you 'stid of me—ayes, sir, 'twas. Did ye hand 'em over safe?"

"Last night I put 'em in Franklin's hands."

"Hunkidory! I'm ready fer to go hum."

"Doctor Franklin wants to see you," said Jack. "Put on your Sunday clothes an' we'll go over to his house. I think I can lead you there. If we get lost we'll jump into a cab."

When they set out Solomon was dressed in fine shoes and brown wool stockings and drab trousers, a butter-nut jacket and blue coat, and a big, black three-cornered hat. His slouching gait and large body and weathered face and the variety of colors in his costume began at once to attract the attention of the crowd. A half-drunk harridan surveyed him, from top to toe, and made a profound bow as he passed. A number of small boys scurried along with them, curiously staring into the face of Solomon.

"Ain't this like comin' into a savage tribe that ain't seen no civilized human bein' fer years?"

"Wot is it?" a voice shouted.

"E's a blasted bush wacker from North Hamerica, 'e is," another answered.

Jack stopped a cab and they got into it.

"Show us some of the great buildings and land us in an hour at 10 Bloomsbury square, East," he said.

With a sense of relief they were whisked away in the stream of traffic. They passed the king's palace and the great town houses of the duke of Bedford and Lord Balcarras, each of which was pointed out by the driver. Suddenly every vehicle near them stopped, while their male occupants sat with bared heads. Jack observed a curious procession on the sidewalk passing between two lines of halted people.

"Hit's their majesties!" the driver whispered under his breath.

The king—a stout, red-nosed, blue-jowled man, with big, gray, staring eyes—was in a sedan chair surmounted by a crown. He was dressed in light cloth with silver buttons. Queen Charlotte, also in a chair, was dressed in lemon colored silk ornamented with brocaded flowers. The two were smiling and bowing as they passed. In a moment the procession entered a great gate. Then there was a crack of whips and the traffic resumed its hurried pace.

When they had been conducted to the presence of Doctor Franklin he took Solomon's hand and said:

"Mr. Binkus, I am glad to bid you welcome."

He looked down at the shrewy, big-boned, right hand of the scout, still holding it.

"Will you step over to the window a moment and give me a look at your hands?" he asked.

They went to the window and the Doctor put on his spectacles and examined them closely.

"I have never seen such an able Samsonian fist," he went on. "I think the look of those hands would let you into Paradise. What a record of human service is writ upon them! Hands like that have laid the foundations of America. They have been generous hands. They tell me all I need to know of your spirit, your lungs, your heart and your stomach."

"They're purty heavy—that's why I genally carry 'em in my pockets when I ain't busy," said Solomon.

"I saw Sir Jeffrey Amherst this morning and told him you were in London. He is fond of you and paid you many compliments and made me promise to bring you to his home."

"I'd like to smoke a pipe with ol' Jeff," Solomon answered. "They ain't no nonsense 'bout him. I learnt him how to talk Injun an' read rapids an' build a fire with t'nder an' elbow grease. He knows me plenty. He staked his life on me a dozen times in the Injun war."

"How is Major Washington?" the Doctor asked.

"Stout as a pot o' ginger," Solomon answered. "I rassled with him evenin' down in Virginy an' I'll never tackle him ag'in, you hear to me. His right flipper is as big as mine an' when it takes holt ye'd think it were goin' to strip the shuck off yer soul."

"He's in every way a big man," said the Doctor. "On the whole, he's about our biggest man. An officer who came out of the ambush at Fort Duquesne with thirty living men out of three companies and four shot holes in his coat must have an engagement with Destiny. Evidently his work was not finished. You have traveled about some. What is the feeling over there toward England?"

"They're like a b'ilin' pot everywhere. England has got to step careful now."

"Tell Sir Jeffrey that, if you see him, just that. Don't mince matters. Jack, I'll send my man with you and Mr. Binkus to show you the new lodgings. We found them this morning."

"I kissed her lips and she kissed mine, and for a few moments—"

His Excuse

A newsboy took a handful of peanuts from a peanut stand and was arrested for it.

"Well, what are you here for?" the magistrate demanded.

"I don't know, your honor," the culprit replied, "unless it's 'impersonating an officer.'"

Truthful

"You've been out with worse-looking fellows than I am, haven't you?" (No answer.)

"I say, you've been out with worse-looking fellows than I, haven't you?"

"I heard you the first time. I was just trying to think."

ELIJAH AND THE STRUGGLE WITH BAAL

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 15:17-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—"No man can serve two masters."—Matt. 6:24.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God Hears Elijah's Prayer.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Elijah on Mt. Carmel.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Conflict between Jezebel and Elijah.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Elijah Won the Victory.

1. Elijah's Message to Ahab (vv. 17-18).

When Jezebel became the wife of King Ahab, she waged a savage warfare against God's prophets, killing all she could find, thus seeking to abolish the true religion and set up idolatry instead. Elijah suddenly appeared, announcing the suspension of moisture (I Kings 17:1) as a judgment upon the people for their idolatry. He sounded three striking notes in his message:

(1) "As the Lord God of Israel liveth"—He knew that he represented the living God, therefore did not fear.

(2) "Before whom I stand"—Because Elijah stood before God, he could stand before Ahab.

(3) "There shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."—Drought was the punishment for idolatry (Deut. 11:16, 17).

II. A Challenge to Baal Worship (I Kings 18:17-46).

As soon as Elijah had delivered his message concerning the drought, he retired from the king's sight, while the penalty of the king's sins should be visited upon the land.

1. Elijah Shows Himself to Ahab (vv. 17, 18).

(1) Ahab's question (v. 17). His aim in this question was no doubt to intimidate Elijah, to awe him into submission. The devil goes about as a roaring lion (I Pet. 5:8).

(2) Elijah's answer (v. 18). He denied the charge and boldly declared that the calamity which had befallen the nation was caused by the idolatry of Ahab and his family.

2. The Bold Challenge (vv. 19-24).

(1) The people assemble (vv. 19, 20). At the urgent request of Elijah the king convened the people.

(2) The ringing call to decision (vv. 21-24).

a. The question asked (v. 21). Many of the people had not wholly forsaken God. They attempted to worship both God and Baal.

b. The silence of the people (v. 21). This may have been because of fear of the king, or ignorance, for many were of the opinion that to be religious was the only thing necessary, irrespective of the being worshipped.

c. The method of decision (vv. 22-24). Two sacrifices were to be provided, one to be offered to Baal, the other to God. The one who answered by fire was to be the God.

3. The Test Applied (vv. 25-39).

(1) Offering by the prophets of Baal (vv. 25-29). Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity to prove to the people as to whether Baal was a real god.

(2) The offering by Elijah (vv. 30-39).

a. People invited near (v. 30). There are no secrets in God's worship.

b. The altar repaired (vv. 30-32). Elijah took twelve stones representing the united nation.

c. The offering on the altar (vv. 33-35). After the bullock was in place he had four barrels of water three times emptied upon the sacrifice and the wood so as to fill the trench about the altar.

d. Elijah's prayer (vv. 36, 37). This was a model prayer.

(a) It was based upon covenants (v. 36). All real prayer rests upon covenant relationships.

(b) Its object was God's exaltation (v. 36). Elijah was jealous for God's glory, but the only thing that he asked for himself was to be known as God's servant.

(c) It was for the salvation of the people (v. 37). His heart yearned after Israel. He wanted them to come to know God.

e. The result (vv. 38, 39).

(a) The fire of the Lord fell and consumed, not only the sacrifice, but the wood, stones and dust, even licking up the water in the trenches.

(b) The people fell on their faces and confessed that the Lord was the God.

4. The Execution of Baal's Prophets (v. 40). Israel's government was a theocracy. God was their King. Idolatry was treason against the King.

The funeral of Thos. Jipson one of the last of the old soldiers in Orland was held from his late home in South Orland on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. C.L.Ruhlen, of the Methodist church officiating. A quartet from the same church consisting of Mrs. Leonad Kay, Mrs. C.L.Ruhlen, Mr. John Loebe and Mr. Chas. Haehelein, furnished the music. Interment was made beside his wife in the Cooper cemetery. A few relatives from out of town and a goodly number of friends attended the services.

Mr. Jipson died while alone in his home seemingly rather suddenly during the evening or night of April 2, 1924. He was discovered dead in bed the following morning by Mr. Cox, a neighbor who was accustomed to carry water to him each day.

Thos Jipson was born June 29, 1838 in Abildrake County Eng-land and came to America about 69 years ago, living in Orland about 35 years. On December 15th, 1896 he was united in marriage to Mary Hair who died on January 12 1921 at the age of 78 years.

Mr. Jipson served in the Union Army in the Engineer Corps from the early part of 1861 to late 1865 and was honorably discharged at the close of the Civil war. He leaves no near relatives. Mrs. J. ORLAND M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Members and friends of the church notice! Your attention is called to the services for Passion Week, April 13-20. Beginning with Palm Sunday we shall hold services each evening except Saturday at 7:30 o'clock in the church, closing with special services morning and evening on Easter Sunday.

The purpose of these services is two-fold: to give opportunity for each and everyone to receive the real spirit and message of the Passion of our Lord and to afford an opportunity for each one to help some one else by personal service.

April 6th at 2 P. M. voting members meeting. Palm Sunday April 13th services begins at 10 A. M. in the English language.

This is the anniversary of our Lord's supreme sacrifice of himself for others. Is it asking too much that we should make a real sacrifice of our own selfish interests to help make these services a real blessing to others? Will you not set aside whatever might hinder your presence in these meetings? Pray God's blessings upon every service and you will get very great blessing from them.

Mr. Evans will sing "Palm Branches" by Faure at the Palm Sunday morning service. The sermon topic will be "The Triumph of Christ."

The debate announced for last Sunday evening had to be postponed and we hope to have it next Sunday evening.

The choir will provide special Easter music for both services on Easter Sunday.

On Palm Sunday opportunity will be given for the christening of babies and baptism of others. It will also be observed as "decision day."

On Easter Sunday morning members will be received into the church and the sacrament of the Holy Communion will be commemorated.

These services are all for you. Attend them, enjoy them and help make them a great blessing to all. Chas. L. Ruhlen, Pastor.

Most Northern Section

The most northern part of the United States proper is 100 miles in Beltrami county, Minnesota, on the northwestern shore of the Lake of the Woods. This tract is completely separated from the state of Minnesota by the lake and cannot be reached by land without traveling over Canadian territory. It came into the possession of the United States through a geographical error in the treaty of Paris signed in 1783, the original surveyors believing that this territory was south of the forty-ninth parallel instead of north of it.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

LIGHT OR DARKNESS

IT IS for you to choose whether you shall make your dwelling place where the sunbeams are, or where the shadows lie.

From those rational individuals who mark upon a scale the division between light and darkness, to those who never give thought to the matter, time slips away with the same precision, caring not who makes use of the precious minutes or permits them to go to waste.

The man who wanders about in the gloom, indifferent as to the direction he is traveling, is heading straight for the dismal land of nowhere. He is the frowning, fault-finding man, blaming others for his falls and bruises. He lives in perpetual darkness and thinks darkly.

The world has too many such men, too many women of the same miserable type, stubbing their toes in the dark simply because they stubbornly refuse to lift their eyes to the glowing light and let reason illuminate their souls with glorious faith and hope.

Everywhere they go, they take with them the clammy chill of midnight. Their presence is oppressive, though they cannot be made to believe it. They are important to themselves, but fail to impress their importance upon those who consistently press forward among the industrious on the great sun-lighted highway making the best use of their talents.

Anybody, it is supposed, can say what he means, but if you will take time to converse with one of these benighted mortals and seek to draw him out, you will find that in his case the hypothesis is not true.

It takes the genial sunlight to crown the orchards and the fields with fruit and grain. And just so does it require a spiritual sun to bring forth the goodness in man and loosen his tongue to utter words of cheer and wisdom.

The sunny men and women make the best of things, even when their world is gray and cheerless.

All that is beautiful, inspiring, lovable and noble, comes from their enlightened minds, indulgent to the wayward, sympathetic to the unfortunate, benevolent and merciful.

Into the world's darkest places, into the gloomiest hearts, these humane men and women scatter sunshine without reserve. Who does not bless them?

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

WINDING

IN SOME parts of the country an inquisitive girl, after getting ready for bed, throws a ball of string on the floor and, winding the loose end round and round her wrist says: "I wind, I wind, my true love to find," asking the color of the unknown's hair and for other details concerning him. In other sections the girl goes out at night and throws a ball of yarn into an empty house, or into a cellar, and repeating about the same incantation, winds the loose end into a ball. In the first instance the maiden dreams of her future husband; in the second she catches a glimpse of him in the dark house or cellar. Some say that for a surety of success this mode of divination should be practiced on Allhallowe'en and the ball of yarn thrown into a barn.

In origin this superstition is akin to the magic doctrine of obstructive knots. We have already seen how all obstructive knots can so tie up a man's physical and mental activities as to prevent their functioning naturally. But it was also believed by those of olden times that knots, when constructed for that purpose, could bind a man and his affections to one desirous of possessing him and them.

This is undoubtedly the origin of the common "love knot," found even on the collar of the "Most Noble Order of the Garter." The obstruction of a knot of this kind is an obstruction to the

FOOD FOR THE DAY

A SALAD which is both appetizing and good to look at is:

Apple and Onion Salad.

Cut into small cubes two cupfuls of good-flavored apple. Peel and slice, then cut into small cubes a mild-flavored Bermuda or Southern onion. Mix well, add a dozen dates cut into bits, serve with a good-flavored salad dressing on lettuce.

Vegetable and Broth Soup.

Take the broth from a well-cooked tongue; add to the broth one sliced onion, two sliced potatoes, one each of sliced carrot and turnip. Season well with salt, pepper, kitchen bouquet and a few spoonfuls of strained tomato. Cook slowly for an hour, add a teaspoonful of walnut catsup and serve piping hot. Strain if desired, but the soup with the vegetables is far more economical.

Cocoa Doughnuts.

Beat two eggs until light, add two-thirds of a cupful of sugar and beat again. Add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one cupful of milk. Stir together three cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of cocoa, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Mix all together, adding flour to roll. Cut into strips and twist slightly. Fry in deep fat, drain, and when cold roll in powdered sugar.

SCHOOL DAYS

wandering of the man's fancy—Queen Dido and her sandal-knots, for instance, as cited by Servetus. The winding of a cord or a thread was supposed to have much the same effect as tying it in a knot. Idworthy tells of a "charm" found in a house in Naples which consisted of a lemon stuck full of nails; around the nails a long string was wound many times. Many instances might be cited of the efficacy of winding among the ancients. The maiden of today winding her ball of yarn finds therein the heart of her destined husband—as did her ancestors of dim and distant old.

SPECIFIC METHODS OF REMOVING STAINS

The following directions applied to the problem of removing specific stains may simplify the housewife's labor in this respect:

Blood may be removed by soaking first in cold water and then washing in lukewarm, soapy water. Wet starch will absorb the stain from a thick material. Put a lump of wet starch over the spot and, when dry, brush off. Repeat until the stain is gone. Old stains may be removed by means of hydrogen peroxide, to which a little ammonia has been added. Rinse with very weak acetic acid and finally with water. Colors of fabrics are also faded by the peroxide. This fact must not be overlooked.

Cover chocolate or cocoa stains with borax and soak in cold water. Coffee, tea, and most fruit stains may generally be removed by stretching the fabric over a bowl and pouring boiling water onto it so the water will strike the stain with force.

Peach stain is particularly resistant. It is the stain which old-fashioned housekeepers used to tell us would come out when the peach season was over. Rub glycerin over the spot two or three days before washing.

Cream, milk and meat juice stains should be washed first in cold water and then with soap and hot water.

Grass stain is one which is frequently found in households where there are small children, and a knowledge of how to treat it is valuable to the mother. Such stains may be soaked in alcohol if the color is not affected, otherwise, make a paste of soap and baking powder, spread over the spot and allow to stand for several hours. Milk may prove effective when the stain is fresh. Hydrogen peroxide and ammonia, or just ammonia may be used. The effect of the agent upon the color must govern the method employed.

Mildew, when newly formed, may usually be removed by strong soapsuds and sunlight. As the old stains are very stubborn, it is well to see that they are not allowed to grow old. In such cases, a strong bleaching agent must be used, and then the question of color enters to complicate the problem.

Medicine stains are soluble in alcohol, in which they are soaked.

Rust may be removed by covering with lemon juice and salt and putting in the sun or holding in the steam of the tea kettle.

The removal of ink stains is rendered more difficult because it is impossible to know the exact nature of the ink. Colored fabrics may be soaked in sour milk, as the color is unaffected by the mild acid in the milk. Oxalic acid may be effective. Oxalic acid is a deadly poison, therefore it should always be plainly marked and kept on a high shelf. Salt and lemon may be used with success in mild cases.

WHAT WE MUST EAT TO BE WELL NOURISHED

Proteins are the "tissue builders." They contain an element, nitrogen, fruit and other foods, but a certain amount of additional "sweets" are craved and the diet should contain them in some form.

Fat is another energy giver. It is furnished by such foods as potatoes, rice and other cereals.

Starch supplies energy. It is one of the most abundant foods and is found most abundantly in oils, butter and cream. Energy is stored in the body in the form of fats.

Mineral salts such as lime, iron, phosphorus and others are needed by the body to build tissue and to counteract certain acid formations which may take place during the process of digestion. Vegetables and fruits and milk are the sources of these valuable substances. Milk is rich in lime, which is one of the reasons it should figure largely in the diet of children. Spinach and beets give us iron, as do raisins.

Roughage, in the form of cellulose, which is the woody part of fruits and vegetables, is necessary to regulate body processes and aid in the elimination of waste. Therefore the diet should contain the coarse vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce and asparagus, the coarse breads and gritty cereals.

Liquids also aid in elimination of waste.

Last, but not least important, are the vitamins, which have been called "the protective foods." The exact nature of these substances is still a problem for the scientist to solve. This much is certain, there are substances present in some foods which are essential to the proper growth of children and the good health of every one. The lack of these substances in the diet is the direct cause of certain diseases. Milk, meat, eggs, fruits and vegetables contain vitamins. All vitamins are not present in all these foods, one may be found in one and another in a different one.

Peaches, canned in halves, pears also canned, served with whipped cream and a sprinkling of nuts, are always enjoyed as a light dessert. Serve with white cookies.

Chestnuts pounded to a paste after being cooked, added to a custard, make another often asked-for dessert.

The Spirit of Easter

The Famous
Felix Hanson

By Marion R. Reagan

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

SEE here, Jack, you've got to help me out. You see, Jane Ramsay's crazy about writers, and all the chaps at her house that night were either aspiring young authors themselves, or knew most of the famous ones. I was completely out of it. And when I heard her rave about this chap Felix Hanson, and none of the rest of them seemed to know him, why I made a bluff at saying I did, see? I thought it would kind of put me in solid with her. I never dreamed it would go any farther. But here's a letter from her today begging me to come up for Easter Sunday breakfast and bring my friend Felix Hanson. Now, what I want you to do is go along with me and pretend you're Hanson, see? No one will ever know the difference. You look a lot like this fellow's pictures, and if any difficulty does arise, I'll see you through."

Jack Hartford did not receive the suggestion with much enthusiasm, but several hours later as he left Simmons' room, the latter called after him, "Thanks, old man, you're a trump," and immediately sat down to scribble off a note to Miss Ramsay, accepting her invitation.

There was excitement in the Ramsay household when the note arrived. "Oh, mother, we must be sure to have every thing just right. Think of entertaining the great Felix Hanson! I am so glad it happens to be Easter, too; we can get him to tell his famous Easter story. They say he tells it so well. It seems it was the first time he had ever worn a frock coat. He was taking his best girl to church Easter morning, and the girl's mischievous young brother slipped an egg, which had been colored but not boiled, into the pocket in the tail of the coat. He never noticed it until he sat down. Then it was too late," Jane laughed. "We'll get him to tell that one."

Hartford, masquerading as the famous young Felix Hanson was feeling a little warm. He pulled uncomfortably at his collar which seemed suddenly to have grown too tight. Across from him sat the lovely Jane Ramsay, beaming at him benignly over the gaily decorated breakfast table. He could easily understand why Bill Simmons would go to any length to gain her good graces, but why had he to be the one let in for such a mess? If he were found out, what would this girl think of him anyway? It would make him too ridiculous for apology. And on the other hand, he disliked to think of letting so delightful a creature pass out of his life with never an effort to win her. And certainly if she were to continue to believe him to be Felix Hanson, a married man, there was no chance of his ever declaring himself, or even allowing their acquaintance to proceed further. The whole thing was very silly. Darn Simmons anyway.

Jane leaned over the table, "Oh, Mr.

Hanson, won't you tell us that perfectly screaming story about the Easter eggs?"

"Oh, that, that, y-yes, indeed," laughed Jack a little nervously. He looked quickly at Simmons for aid. There was no indication of intelligence on the laughing face of that gentleman, however, and for the moment Jack would willingly have killed his friend. But he would not be undone. His lively imagination came to his aid.

"You see," he began, "My mother wouldn't give me any eggs to color for Easter, so I went around to all the coops in the surrounding neighborhood and stole them. Mother didn't discover it until after I had them all dyed, and of course she was furious. Take them every one back and put them where you got them," she said. And I did. The next morning when the neighbors went to get their eggs and found them all colored, they believed their chickens were diseased. There was no end of trouble and alarm before they learned what really happened."

Simmons laughed loudly, but he was the only one present who did. Mrs. Ramsay and Jane exchanged questioning glances and began talking of other things.

As he said good-bye, Jack could not forego pressing Jane's hand tenderly. "I'm very glad to have met you, Miss Ramsay. I hope I may see you again."

Jane smiled. "Yes, I want to see you again, Mr.—Mr.—what is your right name? You see," she laughed, "I know you are not Mr. Hanson."

Hartford was so surprised that for the moment he could not tell his own name. He was enormously relieved, however, to find their relations might be put on a normal basis.

"Jack Hartford's my name," he said at last. "And say, when can I come up to see you?" he asked in an undertone.

"Perhaps tomorrow," she whispered. There was a twinkle in her eye and a soft smile on her lips that put joy in the heart of Jack as he and Simmons turned to go.

"Well, old man, you were wonderful, wonderful," said Simmons when they were alone. "I bet I stand ace high with her now."

"Oh, do you?" said Jack, and added in a tone of extreme politeness which left Simmons a little perplexed. "I am grateful to you for the opportunity of rendering that service."

Oh, Christ, the pale and bleeding One, On Friday crucified, Three days remaining in the tomb, On Sunday glorified.

Thy sufferings cause our hearts to melt Thy piteous human woe, Thy triumph rolls away our grief, Sin's power is laid low.

Thy blessed Eastertide, O Christ, Death conquered once again; We seize salvation, nor will let Thy sacrifice be vain.

sued that God had provided for them the truth He would not beyond a question do as He has said. It goes still further and robs man of that sense of the need of God and deludes him with the thought that he of himself can be mighty and prevail. What a lie! Satan's great prevailing lie!

Over against that lie the text places "the love of the TRUTH," but it is the love of the truth received. The blind man at the edge of the steep precipice whose next step would carry him to his doom must heed and receive the truth when it is announced to him that the next step would be fatal, otherwise the false idea that he is going on safely results in his death. It is a serious matter whether we are willing to receive the truth as it tells of our present and eternal welfare or whether we ignore it. How serious to allow a lie to carry us to ruin!

But may men readily gain a knowledge of the truth? And will the love of the truth lead to salvation?

When our Lord Jesus Christ said "I am the Truth," did He not speak something final? If He had said I am the truth so far as it is discovered or evolved, or proven, all would be changed. Then we would be waiting for later additions. But His statement has all the force of a conclusion—there is nothing beyond that. Had He said, "I am one of the truths," then we might search for others; but His words encompass all truth. No fractions are crowded out. No small remainders are to be added. This admission, we reasonably look to find what we can gain from Him. What can we know?

Did He say of the Old Testament not a word of criticism, but instead, and at different times the strongest words of commendation? Did He say, "The Scripture cannot be broken"? Then that is final.

Did He say, "These are they that testify of Me"? Then they do.

Did He say that the Holy Spirit would guide His listeners into all the truth, and that He would bring truths to their remembrance later on, and that many things were to be said later on which they could not then bear? Then He has done it.

He who is the truth has given forth the truth. The word thus given reveals the "Word made flesh." Hear Him say, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." How far and away beyond speculation and imagining does the claim of Christianity guarantee to bring us!

To whatever degree accompanied with emotion, the saving of the soul depends upon believing "the record that God gave concerning His Son." It depends upon believing about a person. It is truth found and received. It is more knowable than what we commonly call science. Where the topmost reach of human philosophy ends, this truth begins, for it is the truth of revelation.

We look to the Cross. There we deal with THE TRUTH. The person there offered up, the love that prompted the offering, the actual substituting of Himself for the sinner, the claim that He laid down His life of Himself and that He had power Himself to take it again—all, all that is conveyed to us in the word Gospel has not a shadow of falsehood in it. That Cross! The truth was offered there. For truth it occurred. The truth had foreseen it. In truth it avails and it must eventually prove the death-stroke to Satan's lie.

There comes a day when men, blinded and deceived will be given over to believing Satan's lie. The main reason stated for such a sad fact is that "they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved." When "men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil," they may lack the full consciousness of the fact, but "the lie" has their consent. But today it is the mission of the Holy Spirit to urge upon sinners the truth until they love it. They love it. Once a sinner gets a good view of the Cross, he must love it. He will say, it is enough. This truth is the ultimate concerning the lie that has for so long deceived so many. "It is finished."

That such a man is saved is THE TRUTH. Through sneers and ridicule, through argument and scorn, through life or death, this is the truth—he is saved.

Think then how men through the streets and marts, either believing the lie or the truth. Here, a man deceived and adding to the result of the deception day after day. And, here, a man knowing the truth and loving the truth and adding day by day the precious realization of its worth. Why, man, Christ is sure! THE TRUTH is appealing to you! Why follow a lie to a liar's doom?

WOMAN'S BUSINESS

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

Rats Cause $2,000,000

Loss in U. S. Annually

Each of us is taxed substantially $2 a year for rats.

How do you enjoy this thought? And this doesn't include the evil consequences that come from the spreading of disease by these loathsome creatures.

The Department of Agriculture is doing all it can to arouse our people to the need of rat extermination. It is giving specific information on the best methods of administering poison and the best kinds of poison to use.

The department reports that last year's damage to produce and property by rats was $2,000,000. The department has failed to find any economic purpose served by these rodents.

It is a matter of good citizenship to join in the work of their complete annihilation.—Thrill Magazine.

The sheep census gives us about 37,000,000 sheep compared with 79,000,000 for the Australasian district, and a figure slightly in excess of our own for Argentina. The world total is estimated at about 573,000,000 and the annual production of wool averages about 3,000,000,000 pounds.—Nature Magazine.

Police Carry Phones

The French police are reported to possess a new device in telephonic arrangements. This pocket phone is now used enables the members of the force to communicate with headquarters from almost any point in the streets of the city, and at any time, with a readiness impossible to the older forms of police telephones. Each officer carries a tiny instrument, practically a microphone, which he can take from his pocket and hang upon any one of the many weathertight and "foolproof" terminals which are placed in convenient localities and communicate with headquarters.

Cob Pipe Industry Grows

Cob pipes, for years known as the "Missouri Meerschaum" because more were made in that state than any other, are now being made on a large scale in other states, principally Arkansas. One factory in Arkansas last year made and sold 90,000. In Missouri the cob pipe industry totals about $100,000,000 a year.

By F. A. WALKER

LIGHT OR DARKNESS

IT IS for you to choose whether you shall make your dwelling place where the sunbeams are, or where the shadows lie.

From those rational individuals who mark upon a scale the division between light and darkness, to those who never give thought to the matter, time slips away with the same pre-upon those who consistently press forward among the industrious on the great sun-lighted highway making the best use of their talents.

Anybody, it is supposed, can say what he means, but if you will take time to converse with one of these benighted mortals and seek to draw him out, you will find that in his case the hypothesis is not true.

MOKENA M. E. CHURCH

Sunday School 10:30 a. m. Evening worship, 7:30 p. m. During this Lenten season a great challenge has been presented to us. It is the challenge to Jesus way of life. Today the Christ is being held up before a needy, sin-sick war torn world as never before; not The Christ of the creeds, or The Christ of tradition, but the real Christ of history, whose revolutionary principles must be applied to our own life and age. Next Sunday the pastor's topic will be "The Courage of the Master". All are most cordially invited to attend this Palm Sunday service.

ORLAND CARD OF THANKS

With great appreciation to all who so kindly assisted us during our recent bereavement, we desire to extend our hearty thanks. Also to Rev. R. A. Mangus and Rev. Brown for their comforting words, and for the many beautiful floral offerings.

Mrs. James Cooper and family.
